Promoting academic research and education as a contribution to democratisation

Education and science, as well as collaboration with universities, are part of the Foundation's critical and progressive work. Under the auspices of the Communist University Universities and the Promotion of Critical Research and Teaching as a Contribution. Rosa-Luxemburg-Stiftung in Tunisia" in 2014. In cooperation with several partners, the Rosa-Luxemburg-Stiftung promotes academic freedom and independence of universities, along with alternative and emancipatory methods of teaching and learning.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradictory; regional governments are using control measures ranging from concessions to repression. However, many North African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

Education and science, as well as collaboration with universities, are part of the Foundation’s critical and progressive work. Under the auspices of the Communist University Universities and the Promotion of Critical Research and Teaching as a Contribution. Rosa-Luxemburg-Stiftung
in Tunisia" in 2014. In cooperation with several partners, the Rosa-Luxemburg-Stiftung promotes academic freedom and independence of universities, along with alternative and emancipatory methods of teaching and learning.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures ranging from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures ranging from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures ranging from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures ranging from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures ranging from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures ranging from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures ranging from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures ranging from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures ranging from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures ranging from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures ranging from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures ranging from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures ranging from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures ranging from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures ranging from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures rang-

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures rang-
ning from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures rang-
ning from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures rang-
ning from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures rang-
ning from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures rang-
ning from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures rang-
ning from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures rang-
ning from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures rang-
ning from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures rang-
ning from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures rang-
ning from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures rang-
ning from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures rang-
ning from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.

The consequences of the “Arab Spring” are very contradic-
tory; regional governments are using control measures rang-
ning from concessions to repression. However, many North
African states are facing one common challenge: Poverty
and groups were forced into illegality; state repression is
by a high degree of polarisation. Influential political figures
receive these societies.
ROSA LUXEMBURG STIFTUNG

The Rosa-Luxemburg-Stiftung, a research and education organization funded by the German government, cooperates with more than 70 project partners in Africa. The foundation’s work is structured around four regional offices:

NORTH AFRICA REGIONAL OFFICE (TUNIS)
- HEAD: DOROTHEE BRAUN
- EAST AFRICA REGIONAL OFFICE
  - HEAD: ANDREAS BOHNE
- WEST AFRICA REGIONAL OFFICE
  - HEAD: PANOS SCHAEFER
- SOUTHERN AFRICA REGIONAL OFFICE
  - HEAD: DR. AHOUD AMIN CANOUM

The foundation focuses its work on promoting economic, political, and cultural exchange, as well as the advancement of social justice and democratic values. It supports projects that aim to strengthen democratic participation and identity-building in the face of economic injustice and other social challenges.

The foundation supports organizations and individuals who are working towards the realization of democratic participation as a valued practice; a meaningful and essential component of a self-determined life. In Africa, the Rosa-Luxemburg-Stiftung cooperates with more than 70 project partners in various regions. The foundation’s work is characterized by solidarity and open dialogue, as well as the exchange of knowledge and experiences.

RESOURCES AND PUBLIC GOODS

- DEFENDING ACCESS TO NATURAL RESOURCES AND PUBLIC GOODS
- FACILITATING DEMOCRATIC PARTICIPATION
- IDENTITY, PAST AND FUTURE – UNDERSTANDING HISTORY AND CONFLICTS
- FOR INTERNATIONAL DIALOGUE AND COOPERATION

The foundation supports dialogue and cooperation to stimulate interaction based on mutual trust. It promotes understanding and dialogue based on critique in solidarity – as a chance to learn from each other and to jointly shape a prosperous future.

The Rosa-Luxemburg-Stiftung advocates a sustainable freedom that is more than the absence of war. It supports the development of democratic societies and institutions, as well as the promotion of economic justice and social security. The foundation believes that freedom is a fundamental common good; decent work is part of a fulfilled life; and the good life is permanently possible. Therefore, our vision aims at overcoming economic injustice and their own failure to overcome it. We advocate a sustainable freedom that is more than the absence of war. We support the development of democratic societies and institutions, as well as the promotion of economic justice and social security. The foundation believes that freedom is a fundamental common good; decent work is part of a fulfilled life; and the good life is permanently possible. Therefore, our vision aims at overcoming economic injustice and their own failure to overcome it. We advocate a sustainable freedom that is more than the absence of war.

The Rosa-Luxemburg-Stiftung supports dialogue and cooperation to stimulate interaction based on mutual trust. It promotes understanding and dialogue based on critique in solidarity – as a chance to learn from each other and to jointly shape a prosperous future. We believe that freedom is a fundamental common good; decent work is part of a fulfilled life; and the good life is permanently possible.

MISSION STATEMENT OF THE CENTRE FOR INTERNATIONAL DIALOGUE AND COOPERATION

The Centre for International Dialogue and Cooperation (CIDOC), together with our partners, aims to follow a path that can lead to a more peaceful and just world.

IN COLLABORATION WITH OUR PARTNERS

We advocate a sustainable freedom that is more than the absence of war. We support the development of democratic societies and institutions, as well as the promotion of economic justice and social security. The foundation believes that freedom is a fundamental common good; decent work is part of a fulfilled life; and the good life is permanently possible. Therefore, our vision aims at overcoming economic injustice and their own failure to overcome it. We advocate a sustainable freedom that is more than the absence of war.

FOR INTERNATIONAL DIALOGUE AND COOPERATION

The Rosa-Luxemburg-Stiftung supports dialogue and cooperation to stimulate interaction based on mutual trust. It promotes understanding and dialogue based on critique in solidarity – as a chance to learn from each other and to jointly shape a prosperous future. We believe that freedom is a fundamental common good; decent work is part of a fulfilled life; and the good life is permanently possible.

RESOURCES AND PUBLIC GOODS

- DEFENDING ACCESS TO NATURAL RESOURCES AND PUBLIC GOODS
- FACILITATING DEMOCRATIC PARTICIPATION
- IDENTITY, PAST AND FUTURE – UNDERSTANDING HISTORY AND CONFLICTS
- FOR INTERNATIONAL DIALOGUE AND COOPERATION

The foundation supports dialogue and cooperation to stimulate interaction based on mutual trust. It promotes understanding and dialogue based on critique in solidarity – as a chance to learn from each other and to jointly shape a prosperous future. We believe that freedom is a fundamental common good; decent work is part of a fulfilled life; and the good life is permanently possible.

MISSION STATEMENT OF THE CENTRE FOR INTERNATIONAL DIALOGUE AND COOPERATION

The Centre for International Dialogue and Cooperation (CIDOC), together with our partners, aims to follow a path that can lead to a more peaceful and just world.

IN COLLABORATION WITH OUR PARTNERS

We advocate a sustainable freedom that is more than the absence of war. We support the development of democratic societies and institutions, as well as the promotion of economic justice and social security. The foundation believes that freedom is a fundamental common good; decent work is part of a fulfilled life; and the good life is permanently possible. Therefore, our vision aims at overcoming economic injustice and their own failure to overcome it. We advocate a sustainable freedom that is more than the absence of war.

FOR INTERNATIONAL DIALOGUE AND COOPERATION

The Rosa-Luxemburg-Stiftung supports dialogue and cooperation to stimulate interaction based on mutual trust. It promotes understanding and dialogue based on critique in solidarity – as a chance to learn from each other and to jointly shape a prosperous future. We believe that freedom is a fundamental common good; decent work is part of a fulfilled life; and the good life is permanently possible.